Music must rank as the highest of the fine arts—as the one which, more than any other, ministers to human welfare.” So said Herbert Spencer more than a hundred years ago.

Whether it’s classical, operatic, Gospel, bluegrass, rock or pop, music is perhaps the most provocative form of expression yet available to man.

Bryan College’s Music Department not only entertains, it trains young men and women how to appreciate music, perform it for others, how to teach it and how to point men to God with it.

President Perspectives
by Dr. Kenneth Hanna

Have you ever noticed the tremendous variety of cars on the road these days? There are two-doors, four-doors and hatchbacks, sports cars and station wagons. Some feature square styling. Others are sleek, aerodynamic machines.

Then there are those stickers on the window. The ones that proclaim the miles per gallon, the options available and of course the inevitable price. Today's customer faces a bewildering array of choices.

Colleges are much like cars. They seem to come in all shapes and sizes. There are over 5,000 colleges from which to choose today. As in cars, people have a preference for what they want in a college. It's a major investment, and they are looking for quality along with economy and future value.

The similarity doesn't end with the miles per gallon, the options and consumer reports and a testimony of stickers and showrooms. Careful shoppers today are interested in consumer reports and a testimony of satisfied customers. Whether it's a car or a college, they do a lot of comparison shopping.

What makes Bryan College distinctive?

Liberal Arts.

Bryan is one of only 212 colleges identified by Harvard researcher David W. Breneman as being a truly liberal arts institution and the only one in this region.

Among the nation's 3,400 colleges and universities, only the liberal arts colleges are distinguished by a mission of providing four-year bachelor of arts education exclusively, in a setting that emphasizes and rewards good teaching above all else. "(The College Board Review, No. 156, Summer 1990)

Communications Technology.

BryanNET is a unique campus-wide computer network first developed at Bryan and now being installed on other campuses. It brings learning resources, academic courses and research software right into the student's residence by cable.

I saw more useful work with computers being done at Bryan College than anywhere else. (Andre Popov, Director of Academic Counseling, University of Moscow, Soviet Union)

Bryan College is the first educational institution that is building a multi-media educational network. (Joel Orr, President. National Computer Graphics Association)

In the very near future all colleges will have to do what Bryan College is doing with computers. (Cliff Johnson, President, Media Management, Inc.)

Science and Origins Research.

A well-trained faculty and a focused curriculum help Bryan students excel in science. One hundred percent of the graduates of the pre-med program have been accepted to medical college. In his article, "Reflections of an Evolutionist on the 'Bryan '89' National Conference on Biblical Origins," Frank Lovell wrote of Bryan faculty member Kurt Wise (Ph. D. Harvard University):

*I suspect that if "scientific" creationism ever does produce a compelling scientific case for special creationism and/or against evolution, it will be Wise (or someone very much like him) who will do it. Gould would not graduate a man who had not mastered his subject, and Wise has clearly done it! He is dynamic, humorous, candid, and accurate. He is now on the faculty at Bryan College, and I envy those students who will take his classes.

Teacher Education.

Improving education is at the top of everyone's agenda. Bryan College is already at the forefront:

* More students are choosing teacher education than any other major.

* Teacher education has the highest minimum standards of any program.

* Students have over 100 class hours of experience before they begin student teaching.

* Seniors score in the top one-third on the nation in the National Teachers Exam.

* Thirty percent of Bryan alumni serve in a teaching profession.

* The Tennessee Department of Education has used Bryan College's teacher education program as a model:

Last week, Tennessee for the first time, participated in a joint training session with Ncate, preparing eighty-five (85) State Board of Examiners who will be responsible for evaluating all programs in the state. (39) Teacher Education institutions across the state.

I need to make you aware of a service revolution. That comes from the preface of Service America? by Karl Albrecht and Romeo Zenke, page 5.

Every week 70 percent of Bryan's student body reaches out to the community in a voluntary program called Practical Christian Involvement. Faculty members provide college education and a Christian perspective to over 100 inmates in five state prisons.

The mission statement of Bryan reflects this commitment: "educating servants of Christ for today's world."

As I think of cars and colleges, I find myself giving thanks for those who make quality Christian education available. I also find myself hoping that more Christians in America will shop wisely when choosing a college. For Bryan, the signs are pointing to a fourth straight year of growth. Thanks for helping to make that possible.

Felicia Olowola and 8-year old daughter, Olubusayo Ayotokunbo (Tokes), flew from Igbaja, Nigeria in late March to join husband/father at Bryan. Cornelius Olowola has been a visiting professor of Bible at the college for the 1990-91 school-year.

Vision: More Than Just a Song
by Margaret Thomas

Touring with “Vision” was one of the best experiences of my life. After a strict audition and a two week rehearsal camp in August, six of us left on September 1 in one of the school vans, not to return for 16 weeks.

As part of the Admissions Department, we visited schools and churches, ultimately giving close to 130 concerts. We covered nine northern states and Ontario, Canada, staying with host families and alumni who graciously took us in. It was so special to see how God’s children take care of one another all across the continent. God seemed to always meet our needs through people who we had never even met before, and we were able to turn-pray for their needs and to encourage them.

Not only were we able to minister to others, but our lives were also greatly enhanced by the opportunity. God taught us each day about relationships, perseverance, and prayer.

Chris Watkins, director of ministry teams, taught us how to live excellent lives and to do our best for God in all situations. Chris’ example kept us sensitive to the Holy Spirit. We all learned what it really means to serve God every day.

Our main purpose in going out was ministry, followed by recruitment. During Fall Tour 1990, over 10,000 church member and high schoolers were encouraged to put their faith into action and to stand firm for Christ. We were also able to spread the name of Bryan College and generate over 1000 names of potential students.

Next year, “Vision” will travel approximately six weekends per semester to do concerts in Chattanooga, TN and the surrounding area. The number of singers in the group will increase from four to eight, and I am very excited about the opportunities ahead for them. I hope that their time with “Vision” will be as wonderful as mine, because I had the experience of a lifetime.

“Free Kuwait” T-shirt. The guy we met was a student whose parents sent him to America to get away from the fighting. He thanked us for what our country was doing and shared his plea for peace.

People are what make the difference in Washington. The lobbyists, voters, Congressmen, and even protesters are what shape the future of our nation. The people have the power to change our nation, to make sure that Kuwaiti students get homes as soon as he can and to allow our soldiers to come home. What challenged me most on our trip was how much responsibility that leaves us as Christians. Being informed on current issues, writing letters to our Congressmen, and voting responsibly are vital to secure our Christian heritage in our country.

Students See D.C. Inside Out

Washington, DC, is famous for its museums, monuments, and historical significance. But it is most famous for the people living and working there who form and influence the processes of the federal government. The students who went on the Federal Seminar in January met quite a few of those people who are concerned with evangelical and conservitive issues.

After the nine hour drive in Dr. Spoede’s car and a Bryan van, we were glad to finally get to Jodie Koan’s house in Washington. Her three daughters and son attended Bryan. The girls stayed at her house for the two nights we were in Washington before we checked in at the Washington Plaza Hotel. The guys stayed in other homes; two stayed with Stacy Christensen, a former Bryan student. Koan is the office manager for the National Association of Evangelicals’ (NAE) public affairs office. She organized this thirty-fifth federal seminar. Besides being former missionaries, the Koans have lived in many foreign countries, including Kuwait.

Ten colleges from the Christian College Coalition participated in the federal seminar. Evangel was the only college that brought a group larger than Bryan’s 15 students. Dr. Robert Spoede, chairman of the division of history, business, and social science, was our faculty sponsor. Most of the students involved were history or pre-law majors, but there were a number of students with other majors. One interesting part of the seminar was talking with other students and comparing Bryan to their schools.

A highlight of our trip was eating breakfast in the Capitol Building and listening to Congressmen tell how they are dealing with current issues. Representative Dana Rohrbacher from Southern California talked with us about federal funding for the arts. He would like to see taxpayer’s money spent in better ways than in programs like the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA). Recently the NEA was part of a controversy over the funding of “obscene” art. Rohrbacher explained how he stands up to those who oppose his viewpoint. One lobbyist approached him and said, “Your position for the arts makes me want to puke!” He replied, “Put a frame around it and maybe you will get a grant from the NEA.”

The controversy over federal funding for the arts concerns many budget-conscious conservatives.

Representative Stephen Solarz from New York, a liberal Democrat, explained to us why he supports President Bush’s use of force in the Gulf crisis. “Hussein’s despotism is different from just despotism,” he said. “It is despotism on the march, and we need to stop it.” The comments of these Congressmen and other Washingtonians helped us understand, in a hands-on way, how the system actually works.

Of course, don’t think that the entire trip was spent in intellectual pursuits. We also got in some major sightseeing, from a private tour of the Capitol Building to reading the actual Constitution. We got well acquainted with the Metro, Washington’s transportation system, too.

Another memorable experience was having dessert at Bryan alumna Debbie Barwick’s house. Dr. Spoede arranged to have Bryan alumni who now live and work in Washington to come so we could meet them. All of them have interesting jobs, from Dr. Spoede’s son David who works in the Pentagon, to Debbie Barwick who works in a timber lobbying firm. They shared their good advice with us: study hard, pay attention in your Bible classes, and enjoy your friendships—make them last.

We met many other people, including an anti-war protester who was against abortion; Dr. Carl Henry’s son Paul, who is a Congressman from Michigan; and Congressman Cooper, who is the representative for our area of Tennessee.

One of the last people we talked to was at the Kuwaiti Embassy. A few of us went to see it and get a...
Bob Spoede Announces Retirement

Devotional of Bob Spoede To Bryan Faculty, March, 11, 1991

It was about ten to twelve years ago on a morning when I was scheduled to give the second major test in my Western Civilization courses that I went to my college mail box. Opening my box I discovered that the only item in it was a plain, brown-wrapped package. Opening the package with some trepidation I discovered an unmarked audio cassette tape. With some bewilderment I went to the library and obtained a tape player from Ginny Schatz and started the tape. I heard this:

"Another manifestation of the love that the students have shown is this 'Spoede Repellent' which 'keeps the facts and terms away.' "Kills Terms on the Spot,' was 'Good for History Dictators and Other Germs' and contained 'Mass quantities of caffeine, Celts, Bolsheviks, Mensheviks, Germans, Dunes, Medes, Italians, French, Spanish, Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Menonites, Camamites, Levites, Good-nights, uptights, down-rights, late-nights, all-rights, Danskin Tights, gang-fights, Lorites, Cherylites, the night lights, Anti-Spoede bodies.' This trophy was presented by young ladies named Cheryl and Lori."

Truly my wife Nancy and I have feasted on a banquet of love for those eighteen years from both the students and our colleagues on the faculty and staff.

During my years at Bryan my objectives have been twofold:

First, to serve the students, so prized of the Lord, that come to Bryan by striving to insure that the degrees they earn at Bryan will become ever more prized. This is not a matter of pride but obedience to the Word of God when we who are His disciples are to deliver our goods and services. He says in Leviticus 19:35, "Do not use dishonest standards when measuring length, height, or quantity. Use honest scales and honest weights, an honest ephah and an honest hin."

For me the honest standards include many things, but among them are the entire college's expectations of performance levels of our students as well as the continued reputation of the degrees that are granted by the college. The basis of our performance and standards should not be what outside agencies or interests say but what the Lord would have of us.

Truly my wife Nancy and I have feasted on a banquet of love for those eighteen years from both the students and our colleagues on the faculty and staff.

During my years at Bryan my objectives have been twofold:

First, to serve the students, so prized of the Lord, that come to Bryan by striving to insure that the degrees they earn at Bryan will become ever more prized. This is not a matter of pride but obedience to the Word of God when we who are His disciples are to deliver our goods and services. He says in Leviticus 19:35, "Do not use dishonest standards when measuring length, height, or quantity. Use honest scales and honest weights, an honest ephah and an honest hin."

For me the honest standards include many things, but among them are the entire college's expectations of performance levels of our students as well as the continued reputation of the degrees that are granted by the college. The basis of our performance and standards should not be what outside agencies or interests say but what the Lord would have of us.

Therefore it is not what the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools says or what the Tennessee State Department of Education requires--those should be beneath the standards Bryan sets as its standard of ministry through teaching students. Bryan College's sense of standards should be based on the inward standards derived from a commitment to the excellence of Christ and include the teaching of diligence, redemption of time, application, and stewardship of natural talents.

Second, in allegorical terms, my hope for Bryan would be that it would be a roaring bonfire, aflame with the righteousness and grace of Jesus Christ, and that the wind of the Holy Spirit would carry the graduates and former students of the college--the embers of that fire--where He would so as to light new fires of fervent faith. This broadcasting of the burning brands refers to both geography and vocation. Thus we of the faculty and administration of Bryan would be fulfilling our function in the great commission not only to the foreign mission field but also in the halls of commerce, government, communication, the arts and wherever else His Spirit wills.

Lay ministry is important to both my wife and myself, because it was not through the organized church that we came to know Christ, but through the testimony of Christians who were Christian in all aspects of their life. Sometimes I like to describe them as amateur rather than professional Christians.

As we leave Bryan College we will always remember those involved at the college: the administration, the faculty, the staff, and the students. Over half our married life has been spent here, and all of our three children have attended Bryan. In addition we would be pleased if our grandchildren would attend Bryan in the future.

Why do we choose to leave this very pleasant life we have had the past eighteen years at Bryan where we have been surrounded with all the love of a Christian community and the beauty of the colored hills around us?

One of the reasons can only be described by moments in my life when in 1945 as an eighteen year old I returned from the Marines on leave to my home in Texas. As the train crossed the state line from Arkansas into Texas on each trip, a refrain written by Sir Walter Scott and learned somewhere in my schooling reiterates itself in my mind and silently on my lips:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, 'this is my own, my native land?'"

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, 'this is my own, my native land.'"

As the great goosehead pumps pulling oil from deep in the Texas earth came into view, I, who legally owned none of them, knew that in my heart I owned all the oil wells in Texas and that was more valuable to me than all the millions of dollars of all the wildcaters who had struck it rich. It was a wealth that I could never lose because this land of Texas was mine. In the same way I understand the love of Ted Mercer and Bill Keichersid for the great misty hills and valleys of east Tennessee.

Another reason that we make the move is that continuing in our house on the hill would be to "take our case" and to enjoy the barns full and overflowing of God's blessings upon us. We believe that He has something else for us to do that will not always be easy, but it will be as enjoyable as the past two decades we have spent in college teaching at Mackinac Island, Michigan, and here on this beautiful site.

For many years I have thought that it would be a good idea for the college to invite parents of two entering students to charge us, the faculty, with the responsibility and their expectations of our ministry to their children. Partly this stems from a very great blessing that the Lord provided during my first year at Bryan. Our daughter, having enrolled at Bryan that year, it was my privilege to have her in two of my classes: the History of Western Civilization and the History of the United States.

Only then did I realize that I was two-fifths of her college/faculty and that I had the privilege of teaching my daughter what I really thought she needed to take from those two courses. I could not complain nor criticize her college history teacher. The Lord enabled me to know that I had the same responsibility to all the students who entered my classroom.

I needed to provide my students with what they needed. I needed to feed them good food.
Bryan Life: Making Waves in Radio

by Dr. Deane Cuthbertson

Sshh... If you won’t tell anyone, I’ll tell you another of Bryan College’s best kept secrets. The college sponsors a weekly radio broadcast called “Bryan Life.”

Historically, it began with former president Dr. Ted Mercer doing a weekly half-hour broadcast on WMBW in Chattanooga. That broadcast is still heard at 6:00 pm on Saturdays. When Dr. Ken Hanna became president, with the strong radio emphasis of Moody Bible Institute in his background, the concept expanded to include WREA in Dayton (since dropped), WTLN in Orlando, WEEE in Philadelphia, and WRJZ in Knoxville. Dr. Hanna was the broadcast host for some two years, and he was followed by Dr. Bill Brown and Dr. Gary Phillips. For the last two years, Dr. Cuthbertson, associate professor of psychology, has been the program’s producer and speaker. Under his leadership, three additional stations have been added: WCM in Detroit, WWGM in Nashville, and WHVN in Charlotte. On “Bryan Life,” Dr. Cuthbertson has done a series on Christian marriage, Biblical child rearing, marriage and family from Proverbs, and becoming a whole person; his present series deals with “Obtaining a Christian Mind.” Mr. Doug Barr, a recent Bryan graduate does the program engineering. The broadcast has produced excellent results. There is a good flow of correspondence, and many people share personal struggles. One listener writes, “I have been listening to your radio broadcast on the release of the spirit or our will—God’s will. The Lord is leading me through the process of denying my will and letting Him be completely in charge of my life. Needless to say—I fail time and time again and have to go back through the process. God knows my heart and I truly want to do what’s pleasing to Him.” Another writes: “It is so important for me to do God’s will. The devil fights so hard at times—but I have too much to fight for—I can’t give up. I just want my desires and will to be brought fully in control of the Lord.”

“Bryan Life” radio has also affected Bryan students. Through the kindness and vision of Mr. Tom Moffitt, owner of WTLN in Orlando and WRJZ in Knoxville, students Keith Heishman and Sherri Lisech received scholarships to assist in their education.

Well, the secret is out! Please listen to us, work to have us on your local radio station (anyone with contacts to Christian radio stations should contact Dr. Cuthbertson), have Dr. Cuthbertson do a conference in your church, and pray for the “Bryan Life” outreach. Realize that the potential audience of our present stations is some 7,000,000 people.

American Flag Is Center for Community Performance

The Bryan College Chamber Singers and soloist Dr. David Luther of the music faculty participated in the opening of the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Auditorium in Chattanooga, TN. The thrilling performance of patriotic numbers by large forces of choirs, orchestra and soloists was set against the backdrop of the American flag. The newly renovated auditorium was filled to near-capacity with an appreciative audience.

Over many years, bequests from a number of faithful alumni and friends of Bryan have provided substantial financial assistance to the college. Through thoughtful Christian stewardship which includes preparation of their wills, these individuals have played a key part in God’s provision for the needs of Bryan College. Bequest gifts may be designated to the Endowment Fund which in turn provides assistance to students from Endowment Fund earnings. Bequest gifts may also be used to meet current operating expenses or to fund scholarships and grants to deserving students.

Bryan college gratefully acknowledges the generosity of the following individuals whose bequest gifts have been received recently:

Miss Lynda Clemmons of Medina, Wisconsin
Mrs. Rose C. Goodrich of Dayton, Tennessee
Mrs. Roberta S. Haggard of Americus, Georgia
Mrs. Evelyn M. Prichard of Venice, Florida

Christian estate planning assistance is offered to alumni and friends of Bryan College. For more information or free estate planning consultation, contact Mr. Terry L. Balko, Director of Estate Planning.
The 1990-91 men's basketball team will miss seniors Tina Meeks, Kary Burby, Theresa Napier, and Angie Reynolds. Meeks, a six-foot power forward scored well over a thousand points in her four years as a lady lion and was a rebounding terror to her opponents. Meeks is student teaching and plans to teach in elementary school next fall.

Burby, a speedy, five-nine-foot guard, gave finesse and consistency to the lions during a not-so-easy season of basketball (4-22). A threat on the inside and out, Burby's hustle and court-sense frustrated opposing players. Burby is determined to keep their spirits high, the team continued to battle courageously. Their efforts paid-off. The Lions managed a bid to the NCCAA district playoffs, but lost a close, heartbreaking game to Lee College.

Next year looks a bit more hopeful, as a senior-led team makes its way back to Summers Gymnasium to face another campaign of "round-ball." However, senior Greg Barkman will not be among those returning. Barkman will be exchanging his basketball warm-ups for a cap and gown in May. His leadership and enthusiasm will be missed by all.

The Lady Lions basketball team will miss seniors Tina Meeks, Kary Burby, Theresa Napier, and Angie Reynolds.

books" fitting the category called "God's Book." He says that God revealed to man which books "had the mark of supernatural inspiration," that He "determined what books are part of the cannon," and that "people recognized what God had so determined." Chapter five may be the most interesting chapter in the book. It explains how the words of God were written by the authors through the "presence of the Holy Spirit, who has moved their hearts and minds to write the infallible text."

Chapter six examines early ancient translations, early church translations, the Latin Bible, English and King James versions. It also notes that the American Bible Society reported that "as of the end of 1988, there were 1,907 languages in the world in which at least one book of the Bible has been published...."

When people ask us, "What can you do with a music major?", we love to say, "Just look at our graduates!" As expected, many have gone on to further study or careers in music. Dee Ann Symington (Piano Performance) completed a masters in piano and now runs a thriving piano studio in Knoxville, TN. Melissa Jones Williamson (Music Ed) wasn't even looking for a job, but employers searched her out; she now teaches music in an inner-city public school in Georgia. Scott Hooker (Church Music) went on to complete two masters degrees at New Orleans Baptist Seminary and is presently Minister of Music in Louisiana. Brad Gee (Organ Performance) completed a masters degree in conducting at Westminster Choir College, served as Minister of Music in Florida, and is presently pursing a doctoral program in music at Indiana University. Linda LaCounte (Music Ed) is a master teacher in music at Bloomfield Elementary School in Connecticut, while Esther Carballosa (Church Music) teaches music in a bi-lingual school in Miami.

Jan Howell (Vocal Performance) currently teaches private voice and concertizes; she will be traveling with the Continental Singers this summer. Duane Gehl (Church Music/Christian Ed) is Minister of Music and Youth in McMinnville, TN. Both Jim Koan and Kyle Howard (Music Ed) teach music in Christian schools in Augusta, GA. Dwight Talbot (Church Music) serves as Minister of Music in West Virginia. Tim Evans (Piano Performance) is a graduate assistant in piano at Michigan State University. And the list goes on and on.

Other music graduates hold important and rewarding full-time positions outside the music field. A few of these include Kim Haynes (education), Jonathan Garrett (missions), Brett Roes (business), Gina Raggio McNelly (health services), and Doug Barr (communications). Many also hold part-time employment in musical fields. All our music graduates enjoy using their talents in their local churches, and many direct choirs or participate in choral and instrumental groups. Others are involved in the music of their community (Amy Cleaver's vocal audition won her a spot in the prestigious Dallas Symphony Chorus).

So when people ask us, "What can you do with a music major?", we love to say, "Just look at our graduates!"

The Opportunities

Bryan College may be a small town in the hills of Tennessee, but that hasn't seemed to limit the opportunities music students have to "see the world." Just taking the choral program as an example, students have had unprecedented opportunities for growth and enrichment. The Bryan College Chorale annually travels throughout the eastern United States. Its itinerary has stretched from Miami Beach to Toronto, Canada and all points in between. Performances range from schools to churches to television broadcasts, with one in Canada being nationally televised. This spring the Chorale traveled throughout the South-central and Mid-western states. In 1983 the sixteen-voice Chamber Singers made a mission trip to the Bahamas. (Rumor has it they may return again soon.) In 1987 the larger Chorale boarded a plane for New York City where it performed Handel's oratorio Judas Maccabaeus in Lincoln Center with the American Symphony Orchestra. Last summer forty voices from the Chorale also traveled to Europe for two weeks presenting concerts in England, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and France. These students experienced first-hand the vastly different cultures and also observed possibilities available for ministry previously undreamed of.

Opportunities to see the larger world of music aren't limited to just the choral program of course. The Music Department recently sponsored a trip for interested music students to Bob Jones University's famed opera production of Verdi's Il Trovatore; other trips have included major symphonic and operatic productions nearer to home. Because of all this, it might be only fair to warn anyone thinking of majoring in music at Bryan College that, upon coming to Dayton, they just might end up seeing the world.
The Bryan College Music Major

Part of the reason for Bryan's successful music program and graduates is its faculty. When a student takes a music class at Bryan, he or she is studying with someone who has firsthand experience with the subject. That might include the scholarly world of research, the concert state, TV production, or the local church.

David Luther, who received his doctorate in vocal performance from LSU, is completing his thirteenth year on the music faculty. He teaches in the areas of voice, church music, and conducting; he also directs the Bryan College Chorale and the Chamber Singers which travel widely. He is in demand as a baritone soloist and can be seen regularly on the syndicated television program "Changed Lives" from First Presbyterian Church in Chattanooga, TN. Recognized as an outstanding musician in all types of music from gospel song to opera and oratorio, David recently shared the stage as a featured soloist with Shirley Jones at the dedication of the Soldiers and Sailors Auditorium in Chattanooga. Luther is also active as a choral clinician and judge. His vocal students at Bryan regularly take top honors in state and regional competitions, and his busy schedule of private voice teaching often draws students from other towns who come to study with him. (One such student regularly flew to Dayton for lessons in his private plane.) A popular teacher both in and out of the classroom, David Luther is clearly one of the reasons for the music department's success.

Sigrid Luther holds a doctorate in piano performance from LSU and is also completing her thirteenth year at Bryan. She teaches in the areas of music theory and piano. Her piano students often pursue graduate study, and many have won local and state competitions. Typical was this year's winner in the MTNA Wurlitzer Piano Competition for the state; competing against pianists from the largest state universities in both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Dr. Luther's student won the competition. She is also very active as a judge for the National Piano Guild, has taught piano at the prestigious TN Governor's School for the Arts, and is past-president of the Chattanooga Music Teachers Association. Sigrid is widely recognized as a first-rate concert pianist and accompanist, recently presenting a concert for the Tennessee Music Teachers Association state convention. Her research on Leonard Bernstein's composition "Birthdays" has been published in Arts and Letters. She has also been recognized for her overall leadership by being elected chairman of the Bryan College Faculty.

Dr. Mel R. Wilhoit completed his doctorate in church music at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and is in his eleventh year on the music faculty. He teaches instrumental music, music education, church music, and music history; he also directs the Bryan College Symphonic Wind Ensemble. His articles on songwriters appear in The New Grove Dictionary of American Music; additional articles can be found in various journals such as Faculty Dialogue, The Hymn, International Trumpet Journal, and REJOICE. He is currently working on a full-length biography of the gospel songwriter Ira D. Sankey and has delivered papers on the subject to national meetings of the Hymn Society and to the Sonneck Society for American Music. As a music historian, Wilhoit has received numerous research grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Pew Charitable Trusts, and the Faculty Scholars Program (Univ. of KY). Mel is also active as a music festival judge and trumpet performer. He teaches instrumental music in the Dayton community and serves as Minister of Music at Middle Valley Baptist Church in Chattanooga.

Additional part-time and adjunct faculty round out the teaching staff in the music department. When combined with the wide experience and long-term commitment of those profiled above, it goes a long way to explain the unusual success of a big music program in a small college.

Alumni Influence Prospective Students

by the Director of Admissions, Tom Shaw

Alumni have a special opportunity to refer prospective student names each October. In a joint effort with the admissions department, all alumni receive a letter along with a postage-paid reply card on which to write the names of students that they think would benefit from our excellent education program. On average, alumni refer 2-3 names each October, so it’s never too late to bring in your friends, family, and neighbors.

Bryan Alumna and Trustee Receives Moody Faculty Citation Award

On Tuesday, February 5th, Bryan College alumna and trustee Rosalie de Rosset '69 received the faculty citation as outstanding professor at Moody Bible Institute. The words “intelligent, perceptive, humorous and practical” have been used by her colleagues to describe Rosalie.

Born in Peru to missionary parents, she spent her early years growing up on the mission field. After graduating from high school, she enrolled at Bryan College, where she received a B.A. degree. She began at Moody as a writer in the radio department and soon began teaching part-time. Rosalie became a full-time teacher in the communications department in 1974. She currently is enrolled in a doctoral program at the University of Illinois, Chicago.

In addition to teaching and serving on Bryan’s Trustee Board, she has been published in some Christian periodicals such as Moody Magazine and Christianity Today. Rosalie has spoken at Bryan College and recently was invited by Christian Women Communicating Internationally to speak in New Zealand.

Our congratulations to Miss Rosalie de Rosset.

Reunions:
Class of '36 - Fall '91 (55 Year)

TIBBS x'34 and Helen MAXEY are maintaining a busy travel schedule from their retirement home in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Tibbs celebrated his 80th birthday, but he says, "I don't feel 80." He mentions four parties given to remember the occasion: in Kansas City, in Colorado Springs, in Tennessee, and in Winter Park, Florida.

Ralph and Rebecca Toliver celebrating their 50th Wedding Anniversary

RALPH '37 and REBECCA (HAEGAR) '38 TOLIVER were pleased to have their five children with spouses and their seven grandchildren together for the first time in 18 years, when they met in March 1990 at the home of Dan and SYLVIA (TOLIVER) '67 MACNEILL in Signal Mountain, TN.

Another important family event was the celebration of Ralph and Rebecca's Golden Wedding Anniversary, which was held in October while son Ralph and his family were living in Dayton on furlough from Peru as Wycliffe missionaries. The Toliver wedding actually took place on July 11, 1941, in a little stone church at Liang Feng Ya on the hills overlooking Chungking, China, where they served as Bryan's first alumni missionaries.

TY PRAY '39 is back in Texas for the winter visiting friends in Zapata, where he lived for several winters, but he is maintaining his mailing address in Peritas. Last summer he had a Bible study group in his home area near Traverse City, Michigan. He travels with his mobile home between wintering in the south and gardening in Michigan in the summer.

JANET WEBB '39 has retired from Sunday school teaching as well as from her public school assistance. She lives in Eustis, Florida, and continues to drive in the daytime for necessary errands.

She went to a granddaughter's graduation in Tullahoma, TN; her 55th high school class reunion in Clearfield, PA; and homecoming at the Presbyterian church in Lancaster, KY, where Rhody was pastor for 20 years.

GRACE (THEOBALD) x'46 and Clare McGILL make their home in Glencoe, Ontario, Canada, since their retirement from missionary service in Taiwan.
